Contractor, farmer fined in crash that killed 3 migrants - The victims were riding in a van in Burlco. U.S. labor authorities said the crew leader wasn't registered.

Three migrant workers from Latin America might not have died on a field in Burlington County if the contractor who hired them had been registered with the government, federal labor officials say.

The Labor Department on Tuesday fined the contractor, now a fugitive, and the farmer who hired him about $25,000 each for violations of the Migrant and Seasonal Agricultural Worker Protection Act.

Federal regulations require that crew leaders register with the state and show proof that vehicles used to transport workers are safe and insured.

The 1988 Ford van that ferried 11 men to James Durr's Chesterfield flower farm in early September did not have enough seats, forcing some workers to sit on the floor and others on plastic crates, said Corlis Sellers, an official with the Labor Department's Wage and Hour Division.

Several workers were thrown from the van when it clipped a utility pole at 6 a.m. on the Friday of their first week at Durr's 500-acre flower farm. Alfredo Lopez, who hired the crew, fled the scene, officials said.

"This tragedy might not have occurred if Mr. Durr had engaged a registered crew leader as required by law," Sellers said.

Fatal accidents involving vehicles driven by crew leaders of seasonal workers are not uncommon. In the last year, the Department of Labor investigated three in the Philadelphia region.

Durr said yesterday that he had never hired workers through a crew leader before Lopez approached him at an unusually busy time in the fall. He said he preferred to hire the same steady crew of men he knew personally - and had for the dozen years that migrants had been cutting flowers on his farm.

Durr said he did not know he had to check Lopez's credentials. "I was wrong," he conceded. "I know ignorance is no excuse . . . [but] I wasn't up-to-date on the rules."

Still, he has appealed the fines, saying they are a hardship to his farm. He said he employs about 40 migrant workers at the peak of the season and pays them at least $7 an hour, with those with the longest tenure earning the most.

The workers killed in the accident were Gabriel Noe and Jose Gonzalez, both of Guatemala, and Adan Chacha Chaga, whose body was flown back to his home state of Veracruz by the Mexican Consulate in Philadelphia. It was unclear what happened to the bodies of Noe and Gonzalez.
